Almost Done!

Construction on the new Hanson Reading Room is almost completed! The crew from Thomas & Marker Construction and law library staff are working to put the finishing touches on this newly renovated space, which should be ready for use the first week of classes. Signs will be posted when the new space is open.

The new Hanson Reading Room is an enlarged reading room space with five skylights, custom-built bookcases and tables, and new chairs. There are also two soft-seating discussion areas and two special-use alcoves that will be used extensively for seminar classes and other training sessions and presentations. Three new group study rooms for students have been created from former library staff offices, and new offices for library staff have been created out of part of the old computer lab space. To see pictures of the construction project from its beginning, be sure to check out this page on the library's web site:

As many of you already know, the library also has a new technology center, which opened just after graduation in May. This center, which is just inside the entrance to the south side of the library, houses 15 computers for student use, a new service counter, and office space for Larry Baumgardner and his student assistants.

Please let us know if you have any questions about these new spaces!
